“ Always enjoyed working on Sandy's computer for him to make sure his solitaire game was up and running. We had many good memories working on satellites back in the old days of the big dishes. He always had me a cold coke buried in that ice machine when I would come be and a pack of nabs, or a bag of fresh parched peanuts. I told him one day while we working on a project that we needed to sit down and make a computerized list of all those tv vacuum tubes, he laughed and said "James that would take us a long time and we could be playing pool instead". May the Lord comfort his family during these times.
